

School Board Nominations 2022

Dr Saul Karnovsky

As a former public-school teacher and Curtin University research and teaching academic, I bring a wealth of professional experience and passion for education to the school board. I hold a Doctorate in Education with expertise in wellbeing and school resilience. I am committed to representing parents to provide a strong voice for their cares and concerns. As a person living with a physical disability, I am also a committed advocate for diversity and equity. As a skilled communicator and mediator, I will work diligently with the school leadership and parent community to ensure the best outcomes for our students.

Dhruv Patel

With my diverse background built upon various community engagement activities, understanding of education sector operatives and long-standing Australian public-service employment, I bring a unique perspective to the table as an effective contributor to the board. I am enthusiastic about engaging with the board, school authorities and other stakeholders to achieve outcomes that reflect the best interests of every student while winning trust for the community. With understanding of holistic improvement of student experience, factors affecting performance, safety and wellbeing, school budgets, and local community priorities I can commit to striving for high-quality public education that supports development of all children.

Dr Amanda (Mandy) Greenman

I am a GP working at a medical practice in our local community. I'm a mum of two boys; Xavier, who attends MLPS in Year 4, and Timmy, who will be starting kindy in 2025. I am committed to actively supporting school initiatives. I have regularly volunteered in the classroom, been a Class Rep for 3 years, and organised year group events to foster connection. I am passionate about quality educational outcomes, good governance and ensuring the well-being of our kids. I am driven by working collaboratively with others to promote the best interests of all students and their families.
